Weather radio reception limited due to old equipment

By Calily Bien and Lauren Kravets Published: May 16, 2016, 12:35 pm Updated: May 16, 2016, 6:36 pm

AUSTIN (KXAN) — If you depend on the National Oceanic and Atmosphere Administration weather radio for weather alerts, you might have noticed some issues with the signal over the past week. Right now, the NOAA radios are nearly useless in parts of Central Texas.

Bob Frost helps program the radios for people who live in Sun City, a retirement community in Georgetown. But Frost says they haven't had a clear signal in months and people aren't getting weather alerts.

"A number of our residents aren't smart phone folks, and so they don't have the ability to get alerts either through an App or the phone itself, so this [radio] is their lifeline," explains Frost.

The National Weather Service says the transmitter in Westlake appears to be working, but the reception radius is down to only a few miles. The cable and antenna on the transmitter are more than 10 years old and are scheduled for a replacement. The National Weather Service hopes to get the repairs done by the end of May, but they say it all depends on the weather.

"We already have it ready to be installed, however it's the riggers, the people who go up the tower to install the cable, to install the antenna, they have to arrange and schedule that work," says Joe Arellano, Jr. Meteorologist In Charge for the National Weather Service in the Austin area. "It cannot just be done by anyone, it has to be licensed and people who know what they're doing."

Since only specially trained technicians can repair the tower, it sometimes takes weeks for the towers to be repaired.

The situation with the Westlake transmitter is similar to the incident in Llano a few years ago. In August 2014, lightning struck the NOAA weather radio transmitter in Llano County and knocked it out of service. The tower supplied emergency weather alerts for all the radios in Mason, Gillespie, Llano, Burnet and Blanco counties.

The National Weather Services advises if you live in Travis and surrounding counties, you should register your cell phone to receive community notification including severe weather warnings.

MAY FOX HUNT CHAMPS

Sun City Hams Wayne Chauffe and Gary Bowers, in less than one hour, locate a small “hidden fox” transmitter operating at 0.5 watts of power. The transmitter is the size of a cookie box (left of small flag on top of golf cart). Once a month, Sun City’s Amateur Radio Society Club hides the “fox” and conducts a radio hunt to hone their equipment, antenna and directional-finding skills.

This monthly Saturday morning radio hunt is sponsored by the Sun City Amateur Radio Society to hone members’ radio operation and signal-tracking skills. Each month’s winners hide the “Fox” somewhere in Sun City for next months’ hunt.

Sensible safety measures may give added protection against falls

Submitted by Barbara Akers, Emergency Management Committee

As older adults we value our independence. A fall can significantly reduce our ability to remain self-sufficient. More than one-third of people aged 65 and older fall each year, and those who fall once are two to three times more likely to fall again. Among older adults, falls are the leading cause of both fatal and nonfatal injuries and are responsible for significant disability, hospitalization, loss of independence and reduced quality of life.

If you want to stay in your own home for as long as possible, you certainly do not want to fall and risk an injury. Most serious falls occur in and around the home and can be life-changing. To help maintain your independence, it's important to understand the ways you can protect yourself from falls. Some simple precautions can ensure safety and reduce your risk of falling at home.

MAKE YOUR HOME SAFE!

- If you have steps, install and hold onto handrails when going up or down.

Both sides of the steps should have handrails.

- Don't use throw rugs or small area rugs.
- Mount grab bars near toilets as well as inside and outside bath/shower.
- Install adjustable height or hand-held shower heads.
- Place nonskid mats or strips in bath/shower.
- Place nightlights in hallways, bedrooms and bathrooms.

- Place a lamp and telephone near your bed.
- Keep electric and telephone cords near walls and away from walking paths.
- Arrange furniture and other objects so they are not in your way when you walk.
- Keep items you use frequently, such as dishes and food items, within easy reach.
- If you have to use a step stool to reach something, make sure it is steady and has a handrail on top to hold on to.
- Don't let your cat or dog trip you. Know where your pet is whenever you're standing or walking.
- Keep emergency numbers in large print near each telephone.

Assessing your home to identify fall hazards and making the necessary changes to prevent them are significant steps for protecting yourself against falls.
